WILLIAM HAWKEN IS DEAD

Was a Native of England—Leaves a Family of Wife and Seven Children.

William Hawken, a well known resident of Dixon, passed away at 5 o'clock Monday evening at his home, 108 Harrison avenue, the cause of his death being heart trouble. He had an attack of heart trouble last spring, but during the summer seemed to regain his former health. He was up Monday noon but was taken very ill in the afternoon and died at 5 o'clock.

Mr. Hawken was born near Plymouth, England, May 8, 1850, and came to this country thirty-one years ago, spending most of the time since then in Illinois. For nine years he operated the ferry across Rock River at Grand Detour and while living in that village married Miss Millie J. Cool in 1874. Just fourteen years to a day before his death he moved to Dixon. While living here he has followed the occupation of a teamster and part of the time has been in the employ of the city.

His wife survives him and he also leaves five sons and two daughters, Leonard of Freeport, Leroy, George, Claude, Gale, Minnie and Maud who live at home. He has two sisters living, Miss Sarah Hawken in England and Mrs. Nicholas Key of Missouri.

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 at the house by Rev. J. G. Brooks and the burial will be at Oakwood cemetery.

TWO CRUSHED AT ROCKTON.

A Train Wreck There Will Result Fatally to One of the Men Hurt.

One man was fatally, another seriously and a third less severely injured in a wreck at the St. Paul depot at Rockton early Monday morning. The brakeman, George Mitchell, was internally injured, but will probably recover. The others were tramps stealing a ride, one of whom, in addition to internal injuries, had his skull fractured and was at last accounts supposed to be dying.

The wreck was caused by leaving a part of the train on the main line with no brakes set, while making a switch. This section started down the line and met the train as it came back to couple on. Several cars were wrecked.

About the shaft is a heap of black diamonds and one of these is given away with each box of cigars. It is said that Eli puts the coal in the safe each night for fear some one will burst the window in and purloin it. The window was dressed by Eli's assistant, "Dewey" Corcoran.

SPECIAL TOWN ELECTION.

Two Justices of the Peace to Be Elected to Fill Vacancies Tomgrow

FOUR CANDIDATES SEEK OFFICE.

Voters Are Urged to Give Support—Polls Open From 7 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Voters are urged not to neglect the special election tomorrow, October 8th, for the election of two Justices of the Peace to fill vacancies in Dixon township.

The polls will be open from 7 a. m. to 5 p. m. and the only change in the voting places is that of the second precinct, which will hereafter be at 114 Hennepin avenue. Four candidates are seeking office and from the way they are working it looks as though two of them would be elected. The candidates are:

William L. Leech.
Mark C. Keller.
George L. Richardson.
Joseph Staples.

The Several Candidates.

The township is fortunate in the candidates who are up for election for all are deserving of support. Mr. Keller is a popular young attorney, a sketch of whose career we recently gave our readers. We have also spoken of the candidacy of Joseph Staples who will have a large following.

William Leech.

William Leech will be one of the favorite candidates at the special election to be held in this city tomorrow and emphatically merits the most favorable consideration of the voters of Dixon.

This genial gentleman has worked his way through college and law school without any assistance, and is trully a self-made man. Though he appears younger, his age is 26 years. Having been engaged in the law office of His Honor Justice H. R. Bartlett for the past two years, he not only has the theoretical but the practical duties of the office of Justice of the Peace to which he aspires well in hand.

Mr. Leech is very popular with young and old, being upright, steady, justice-loving, temperate and in every way deserving. If elected—and he confidently believes he will be—he will fill the office with credit to himself and prove an honor to his constituents. "Be a booster" in this case, readers, and see that he receives the large vote he so richly deserves.

Geo. L. Richardson.

Geo. L. Richardson is a candidate for Justice of the Peace to fill one of the two vacancies caused by Judge Scott's and Joseph Shaffer's resignations. Mr. Richardson is one of the earliest citizens of Dixon—coming here when a small boy in 1850. No doubt if elected he will fill the office well and faithfully.

ENJOYABLE PARTIES LAST EVENING.

Pedagogues Give Surprise Fagot Party---A Thimble Party.

Yesterday was the birthday anniversary of Prof. Geo. E. Krinbill, supervisor of music of the schools on both sides of the river. The teachers and instructors accidentally learned of the fact and determined to surprise Mr. Krinbill. That they succeeded could not be doubted for a moment when the expression of his face was seen as the groups of pedagogues filed into the Krinbill home on Fifth street last evening. Each group of five had provided a "fagot" or entertainment feature and a merry time was had in the exploitation of these. As a double assurance that Mr. and Mrs. Krimbill should not forget the happy occasion, the North side teachers presented them with a set of silver-handled nut picks, while the South side instrucsors gave a handsome pearl-handled carving set. The speeches of presentation and acceptance were couched in a happy vein and gave rise to much merriment. The occasion was one of much pleasure to all concerned.

A Thimble Party

Mrs. Herbert W. Morris gave a thimble party yesterday afternoon at her home, 703 East Fellows street. A dozen or fifteen ladies were present and passed a pleasant afternoon.

One means of entertainment was a guessing contest as to what kind of cake would be appropriate for people of different walks of life or occupations, as pancake for the tinner, loaf cake for the idler, sponge cake for the fellow who lives off from his relatives, etc. Mrs. Della Rowland guessed the most and was given a pretty Battenburg doily as a prize. Refreshments of ice cream and cake was served.

A POUND'S A POUND.

But a Pound of Feathers Is Heavier Than a Pound of Lead.

That old question about a pound of feathers and a pound of lead takes on new interest when we look at it in a simple scientific way. It seems absurd, of course, that a pound of one thing could be heavier than a pound of another thing, and yet that is exactly what may be shown in this case; not that the pound of lead is heavier than the pound of feathers, as most persons would say on the spur of the moment, but just the other way—a pound of feathers is heavier than a pound of lead.

This apparently inconsistent statement may be quite easily proved. With accurate scales weigh a pound of lead, using ordinary shot for convenience; then with the same scales weigh a pound of feathers, putting them into a muslin bag for the purpose. The feathers and the bag together must weigh exactly a pound.

The next step in the operation will show apparently that there is no difference whatever in the weight of the two articles, for you put the shot in one pan of a balance and the bag of feathers in the other, and after a little seesawing they will come to an exact level.

Now, however, the scientific phase of the question presents itself, and you are reminded that in weighing the articles thus in the open air you have taken no account of the buoyant power of the air, which bears everything up in proportion to the object's bulk. As the bag of feathers is of greater bulk than the shot, it is borne up more than the shot is, and for that reason it is necessary to use a little more than a pound of feathers to balance a pound of lead.

This, however, is theoretical. The practical proof is obtained when you place the balance bearing the lead and the feathers on the receiver of an air-pump and cover them with the glass bell. Then exhaust the air, and you will find that the pan bearing the feathers will sink and the pan bearing the lead will rise, thus showing that when weighed in the ordinary way the quantity of feathers used to make a pound is actually more than a pound.—New York Press.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucuous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

ENCAMPMENT OPENED

Camp Roosevelt Dedicated, Secretaries Hay and Moody Taking Part.

CAPITOL CITY'S WELCOME IS WARM

Boat Races, a Bike Parade and a Red Men's March Are Features of the Day's Exercises.

Washington, Oct. 7.—The ceremonies incident to the beginning of the thirty-sixth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which commenced here yesterday, were varied in character and mostly only semi-official. The only formal proceeding of the day was the dedication of Camp Roosevelt, the tent city on the White House grounds which will be the headquarters of the several corps organizations during the week. The ceremonies there consisted of a number of addresses by men of national reputation, the chief speech being delivered by Secretary Hay. For the rest the old soldiers busied themselves largely in renewing the acquaintances of forty years ago and in manifesting their appreciation of the welcome extended to them by the capital city.

Leading Outside Events.

Of this welcome they found generous evidence on every hand. The events of the day outside the dedication ceremonies at Camp Roosevelt included a fine regatta on the Potomac, an attractive automobile parade, an interesting procession by the Red Men of this city and neighboring cities, and campfires in the evening. Commander-in-Chief Torrance and his staff kept open house all day at the Ebbitt House and received many hundreds of callers. Many train loads of people have arrived, and it is now quite certain that the anticipations of an exceptionally large attendance will be realized.

Dedication of Camp Roosevelt.

Camp Roosevelt is on the White Lot just west of the White House, and between that building and the Washington monument. It is a beautiful greensward, located near the heart of the city, and also is otherwise well adapted to the purpose to which it is to be put. The dedication ceremonies were presided over by the Hon. B. H. Warner, chairman of the citizens' committee of the District of Columbia, and were largely attended by the veterans and by citizens of Washington, including both ladies and gentlemen. The proceedings were bgun promptly at 4:30 p. m. Colonel John McElroy, chairman of the reunion committee, who called the meeting to order and summoned Warner to the stand.

PROGRAMME OF THE DEDICATION

Speeches by Several Persons, Including Secretaries Hay and Moody.

After brief invocation by Rev. W. G. Davenport, Warner introduced Hon. Henry B. F. MacFarland, one of the District commissioners. Before doing so, however, Warner spoke a few words of welcome of his own. McFarland took his seat when he closed in the midst of a generous round of applause, which was renewed and redoubled when the Hon. John Hay, secretary of state, rose to speak for the president. Hay was applauded at frequent intervals as he proceeded. His address was a eulogy of the work of the United States soldier from the beginning.

When the cheers which succeeded Hay's speech had subsided General Eli Torrance, commander-in-chief of the Army, was introduced to respond to the words of welcome, and he spoke warmly in appreciation of the reception given himself and his comrades. Secretary Moody was next introduced. He spoke for Secretary Root, who was detained by official business. Moody expressed regret that the shallowness of the Potomac had prevented the bringing of some of the specimens of the new navy to Washington for the inspection of the old soldiers, and then dwelt for a few moments on the inspiration that the example of the heroes of 1861-5 had been to the soldiers of the present day.

Governor Bliss, of Michigan, spoke very briefly. B. F. Bingham, commander of the department of the Potomac, delivered the welcoming address on behalf of the local Grand Army, and was followed by a few words of thanks to all by Colonel McElroy for their assistance on rendering the occasion so marked a success. The stars and stripes was then unfolded and a national salute closed the dedication.

FIRST CAMPFIRE OF THE MEET

Five Thousand Vets Attend—Red Men's March, Regatta and Fireworks.

Five thousand veterans and their friends last night gathered in Convention hall and participated in the campfire of the Thirty-sixth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. The hall was decorated entirely with United States flags. The ceremonies were opened by a medley of patriotic airs played by the United States Marine band, followed by songs, speeches and music which stirred the veterans to unbounded enthusiasm. Each person entering the hall was presented a small United States flag, and these were constantly waved by the thousands within the building when some old war-time melody was played or some striking utterance delivered. The principal address of the evening was by General Eli Torrance, who congratulated those present on the happiness of the hour and the unity of our hearts. It was late when the campfire broke up.

A spectacular street exhibition was given at 3 p. m. by the Improved Order of Red Men. They marched down Pennsylvania avenue from the capitol to the White House about 450 strong. The organizations participating were the nine tribes of the order in Washington. Their ranks were augmented by the addition of a number of visitors from neighboring states. One of the big features of the opening day was the regatta of the Potomac River Regatta association. It was the first regatta held here since 1896 and proved to be the largest and most interesting in the history of the association. The banks of the river and the bridges over the course were crowded with sightseers. Eleven races were rowed. At night the veterans and their friends were entertained by an exhibition of fireworks on the Washington monument grounds. The principal scene represented was the rescue of the diplomatic legations at Peking.

PRESIDENT WILL REVIEW

Will Be Driven Along the Line of Parade at the Big March.

The following statement was made at the White House yesterday: "The president has expressed to Commander-in-Chief Torrance and to Chairman Warner, of the local committee, his keen regret at his inability to review the parade of the Grand Army of the Republic on Wednesday. His physicians feel that he should not subject himself to the great strain this would involve. He has, however, thought that in some way he might be able to greet the members of the Grand Army in Washington and their friends who accompany them. His physicians today stated that if nothing unforeseen occurred in his condition, and if the weather was favorable, he could safely be driven along the line of the parade on Wednesday, and it is hoped this arrangement can be carried out."

Incidental to the meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic this week will be the convention of the Sons of Veterans. The Ellen Spencer Mussey tent, of the Society of the Daughters of Veterans, an auxiliary organization of the Grand Army of the Republic, was instituted here last night. The installation exercises were conducted by Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, the national president.

Brigadier General Jacob H. Smith, who was retired by President Roosevelt on account of his alleged severity against the natives of Samar, is here. He spoke at the campfire last night and was loudly cheered. The candidates for commander-in-chief most frequently mentioned are General John C. Black, of Chicago; John McElroy, of this city; General Daniel E. Sickles, of New York, and General Thomas J. Stewart, of Norristown, Pa.

TAX VIEWS OF CHICAGO

As Held by Mayor Harrison, Presented in Court at the State Capital.

IMPORTANT ISSUES ARE INVOLVED

Convict Protest Against Work That Was Thought Too Hard—Negro Centenarian Celebrates.

Springfield, Ills., Oct. 7. — Judge Creighton, in the Sangamon circuit court yesterday, began hearing the case of the city of Chicago against the state board of equalization. The proceeding is a petition for a writ of mandamus to be directed against the state board of equalization, commanding that body to assess for the sole benefit of the city of Chicago all railroad property in that city outside the main track, instead of distributing the same throughout the state. They also contend that in fact this property has not been assessed for the benefit of anybody. John C. Mathis made the opening argument.

Assertion of Unconstitutionality.

He contended that the statute which provides for the distribution of right-of-way assessments upon a mileage basis throughout the state is unconstitutional, and that land on which the side tracks, second main tracks, depots, machine shops and other buildings stands should be assessed for the sole benefit of the city in which the property is located; and that only lands under the main tracks should be assesssed for distribution throughout the state.

Been Doing It for Thirty Years.

Lyford, for the defense, contended that the present statute is constitutional, and that railroad property in Chicago is adequately assessed. Attorney General Hamlin delivered an argument in behalf of the state board of equalization. He held that the law under which the state board of equalization operates in making railroad assessments is constitutional, and that the state board has a right to distribute the assessments throughout the state as it had done for the past thirty years.

CONVICTS MAIM THEMSELVES

Chop Off Three Fingers Apiece, Because They Assert Their Work Was Too Hard.

Chester, Ills., Oct. 7.—Two convicts named Reagdon and Rose in the southern Illinois penitentiary here, chopped off three fingers each from their right hands in order to avoid working in the foundry, where, they say, the demands made upon them were beyond their strength. Rose and Reagdon are not robust physically, and their tasks, they declared, were entirely unsuited to their strength. They said, however, that any complaint would be punished by confinement in solitary, so they resorted to the expedient of inflicting painful wounds on themselves in order to obtain at least a temporary relief.

They procured an old rusty hatchet in some manner and each deliberately chopped off three fingers on the right hand. As soon as the men were discovered they were taken to the surgeon, who dressed their wounds, after which they were taken to the prison yard and made to stand upon a block the remainder of the day.

Wife Says It Was an Accident.

Springfield, Ills., Oct. 7.—Chief of Police Herring and Coroner Baer will investigate the circumstances attending the shooting of Mrs. Edward Gomes last Wednesday morning. Mrs. Gomes was wounded by a bullet from her husband's revolver, while the two lay in bed. She was told she was dying, but persisted in the statement she first made—that it was an accident. She said the revolver was put under the pillow, but slipped down into the bed and under her. In attempting to put it back under the pillow she shot herself.

Death of a Prominent Democrat.

Salem, Ills., Oct. 7.—Judge John G. Vaughan, one of the most prominent Democratic politicians of southern Illinois, died Sunday at his home near this city, aged 76 years. He served as probate judge of Marion county from 1873 to 1877. He was the father-in-law of Henry Siegel, of the firm of Siegel, Cooper & Co., Chicago.

TWO IN A CONFERENCE

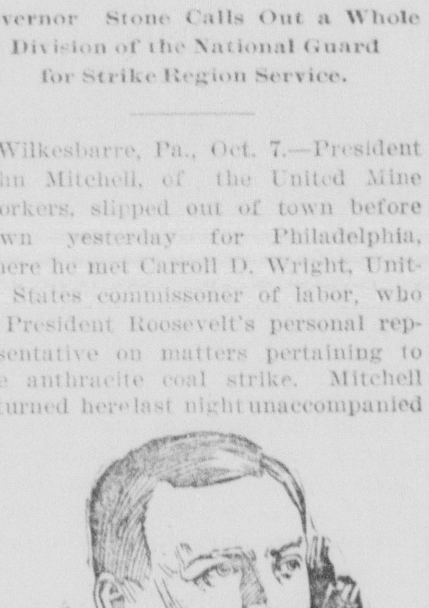
Carroll D. Wright and John Mitchell Meet In the City of Brotherly Love.

THEY OBSERVE GREAT SECRESY

After the Meeting Mitchell Will Say Nothing of Its Import.

Governor Stone Calls Out a Whole Division of the National Guard for Strike Region Service.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 7.—President John Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, slipped out of town before dawn yesterday for Philadelphia, where he met Carroll D. Wright, United States commissoner of labor, who is President Roosevelt's personal representative on matters pertaining to the anthracite coal strike. Mitchell returned here last night unaccompanied and unannounced, and made the simple statement that he had met the labor commissioner. He refused absolutely to discuss his visit to Philadelphia, declining to say where in Philadelpha he met Wright or what passed between them. Subsequently he informed a representative of the Associated Press that he saw other gentlement while there, but declined to disclose their identity.



GOVERNOR STONE.

What Is Supposed to Have Happened.

On the strength of the fact that Wright is close to President Roosevelt there is a general impression here that the commissioner carried a message from the chief executive to Mitchell. A rumor which cannot be verified is in circulation here that President Roosevelt has appealed to Mitchell to end the strike in the cause of humanity. There is no one here in Mitchell's confidence except his three district presidents, and it is doubtful if they knew that he was in Philadelphia until they arrived here during the day and found him absent.

Confers with the District Leaders.

Interest in Mitchell's mysterious trip was intense all day and evening about headquarters. All the local district leaders called, and scores of mine workers were in evidence. No one seemed to know anything, and all were of the belief that some sort of a move is contemplated. Immediately on the return of the strike leader he was besieged, but he refused to see any one until after he had his supper. He granted the newspaper correspondents a brief interview, simply telling them he met Wright and then he and the district presidents went into conference.

WHOLE OF PENNSYLVANIA'S GUARD

Ordered into the Strike Region, and Why It Has Been Done.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 7.—Governor Stone has ordered out the entire division of the National Guard of Pennsylvania to duty in the anthracite coal regions. The soldiers are in the field today. The order calling out the guards gives the following as the reason for such action: "In certain portions of the counties of Luzerne, Schuylkill, Carbon, Lackawanna, Susquehanna, Northumberland and Columbia tumults and riots frequently occur, and mob law reigns; men who desire to work have been beaten and driven away and their families threatened. Railroad trains have been delayed, stoned, and the tracks torn up. The situation grows more serious each day * * *

"As tumults, riots, mobs and disorder usually occur when men attempt to work in and about the coal mines he [the commanding general] will see their all men who desire to work and their families have ample military protection. He will protect all trains and other property from unlawful interference, and will arrest all persons engaging in acts of violence and intimidation and hold them under guard until their release will not endanger the public peace; will see that threats, intimidations, assaults and all acts of violence cease at once."

Governor Stone called a conference of the general officers of the guard, at which it was decided to place these troops in the field.

MICHELL ISSUES A STATEMENT

He Calls for Mass Meetings to Deny the Operators' Charges.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 7.—After President Mitchell had conferred with the district presidents last night he left for Buffalo, but before going gave to the press a statement, of which the following is the substance. It is addressed to district secretaries and mine workers in the anthracite field:

"You have, no doubt, read in the daily papers the proceedings of the conference at the White House last Friday, in which your officers proposed an immediate resumption of work if the operators would agree with us to refer the questions at issue in the strike to the decision of the president of the United States and a tribunal named by him. You have noted the reply of the presidents of the coal-carrying roads, in which they responded to our overtures by denouncing your union, its members and officers in the most vehement and malicious manner possible.

"They also declared that a large majority of the strikers would return to work if given military protection, and they demanded that the president send United States troops to the coal fields. In order to demonstrate to the people of our country that the statements of the operators are unfounded, and that the mine workers are law-abiding citizens, the officers of all local unions should call mass meetings to be held in each mining town at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 8. We know that the mine workers are not restrained from going to work by fear of bodily harm; and if this is the sentiment prevailing at the meetings resolutions should be adopted emphatically declaring the statements of the operators to be untrue.

"We also advise that acts of lawlessness by the coal and iron police and by strikers be denounced, and the services of members of the union tendered the local authorities to preserve law and order. Great care should be exercised that those on strike do not permit themselves to be provoked by the coal and iron police into the commission of overt acts."

The resolutions are to be telegraphed Mitchell's headquarters, "collect," immediately on the adjournment of the meetings. The statement is signed by Mitchell, Nichols, Duffy and Fahy.

BRYAN INDORSES ROOSEVELT

Says He Should Be Commended for His Efforts to Settle the Strike.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 7.—In a statement made last evening W. J. Bryan said President Roosevelt should be commended for his efforts to settle the miners' strike. He suggested, however, that since the operators decline to arbitrate the president's hands are tied, and urges him to call an extra session of congress. Five measures, Bryan says, should be recommended for passage. Summarized these are, in Bryan's language:

"A law establishing a national board of arbitration consisting of three to five members, to consider and report on all controversies between corporations engaged in interstate commerce and their employes; a law abolishing government by injunction; a law that will discriminate between the natural made man created by the Almighty and the corporate giant created by legislation; a law taking the tariff off coal; a law which will prevent railroads engaged in interstate commerce from operating coal mines except for the purpose of supplying fuel for their own engines."

Development at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 7.—There was only one development of importance in the coal strike situation yesterday. Frank P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration, had a long interview with President Roosevelt and left Washington very soon afterwards. Sargent indicated that the interview concerned the coal strike, but he would not discuss the matter. It is thought Sargent went to Philadelphia, where he may have met Mitchell yesterday.

New Haven Aldermanic Idea.

New Haven, oCnn., Oct. 7.—After one of the hottest debates in the history of the city's municipal boards the aldermen passed a resolution to be sent to President Roosevelt calling upon the president to "immediately declare the coal lands public property, after due compensation, and to have them held so and worked by the government."

Daily existence is but a struggle.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you.
Dixon people endorse this claim.

Mr. G. W Thompson of 521 Jefferson avenue, North Dixon, says: "There was not the slightest doubt in my mind but that I suffered from some imperfect working of the kidneys. What to do to check the cause was a mystery. Happening to read an advertisement about Doan's Kidney Pills, I reasoned that if they performed half what they promised they might give some relief, so I went to Leake Bros' drug store for a box. I am convinced from the results obtained that if every sufferer from kidney complaint or backache could be induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills, the treatment would prove of inestimable value.

Obituary.

The funeral of Mrs. Ruth A., wife of M. T. Spencer of Amboy, who died at her late residence on Mason street Oct. 2, 1902, was held from the First Baptist church, Amboy, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 5, at three o'clock, Rev. E. W. Annable officiating, and the remains were laid to rest in Prairie Repose cemetery.

Ruth A. Holmes was born at Corning, N. Y., January 26, 1841. When about sixteen of age she removed with her parents to Dowagiac, Mich. Here she was united in marriage to M. T. Spencer Sept. 2, 1861, he being at the time home from the Civil War on a furlough. The war being ended, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer made their home at Dowagiac until 1878, when they went to Delaware county, Iowa, from thence coming to Amboy, which was afterwards their home.

Mrs. Spencer was the mother of five children, of whom four are still living, namely: Rev. E. H. Spencer of Farlington, Kan., Mrs. Myrtle V. Brown of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Grace E. Terry of Chicago and Mrs. Daisy M. Bryant of Amboy. Besides these she leaves to mourn her death her husband, two brothers, Andrew B. Holmes of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Jacob L. Holmes of Chicago, and two sisters, Mrs. F. A. Lampson of Moffat, Colo., and Mrs. Eva B. Tyler of Dowagiac, Mich., and several grandchildren Mrs. Spencer united with the Baptist church of Amboy in 1886, remaining a faithful, consistent member to the time of her death. She was also a member of the Woman's Relief Corps and one of its officers.

Autumn Raspberries.

As a horticulturist Edward Weibezahn has always had good success, but his latest achievement in the fruit producing line can hardly be expected to become marketable in quantity. At the home of his son-in-law, D. S. Horton, No 216 Crawford avenue, a raspberry bush of a red variety has blossomed during the past few weeks and there are now a number of ripe berries showing upon it.

Crawford School Entertainment.

The pupils of the Crawford school, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Nellie Cortright, will give an entertainment Friday evening, Oct. 10, to buy a school organ. Talent from Dixon will be present and a good program is guaranteed.

Will Serve Lunches.

J. A. Harnish, the Galena avenue confectioner near the bridge, has commenced the serving of oysters in any style and lunches of coffee and chicken or ham sandwiches. He has one of the neatest rooms in the city and will undoubtedly be well patronized.

SUICIDE OF ROCKFORD CITIZEN

Enfeebled in Mind and Body, Joseph Grove Drowned Himself in Kent Creek.

Joseph Grove of Rockford, 75 years of age, enfeebled in mind and practically unable to care for himself, drowned himself in the shallow waters of Kent Creek Monday morning at an early hour.

The aged man arose about 2:30 o'clock, dressed himself and evidently walked to the Elm street bridge. He was seen to pass out of the yard by a neighbor who heard him as he passed along the walk. Mrs. Grove did not notice the absence of her husband until 3:40 o'clock, when she awakened. She aroused the entire family and the police were notified and assisted in making the search.

The body was found at 9:30 by his son, Jacob Grove of Burlington, Ia., who had recently come to care for his father, and when the corpse was discovered it was in shallow water beneath the Elm street bridge.

The deceased had been a resident of Rockford for over fifty years. A pathetic incident had occurred when the aged man had asked to be taken to an asylum on Sunday and had said to his son: "I wish I could lie down and never wake up."

LIBRARY BOARD MEETING.

Held Yesterday Afternoon--Library Open Sundays During Winter.

The Dodge public library reading rooms will be open from 3 to 6 o'clock Sunday afternoons beginning with November 2. This was decided at the meeting of the library board held at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the library. A movement is being agitated among well known local educators to have the library board purchase a list of selected books which shall be loaned to the public schools for the use of the pupils along certain lines of work. A committee consisting of Messrs. E. C. Parsons, Chas. W. Groves and H. V. Baldwin was appointed to investigate the matter thoroughly and report at the next meeting.

Collision in the Northwestern Yards at Sterling.

Sterling Gazette: John Grady, an employe of the Northwestern, had a very narrow escape from death in a slight wreck in the local yards of that company shortly after noon Monday, but as it was he escaped injury other than a few minor bruises. The mix-up resulted in considerable damage to two engines, however, one of them being so badly damaged that it will have to be sent to the Chicago shops for repairs.

The damage was caused by a collision between an extra through east bound freight and the local switch engine.

* * * * * *

The pilot beam of the switch engine was broken and a large hole knocked in the right side of the tank. The pilot of the freight engine was knocked completely off. This engine was not so badly injured but that it was in condition to take its string of cars on, and the freight was delayed only about a quarter of an hour by the accident.

Murray Coal Co.

Today the Murray Coal Co. started up in business at No. 609 Third street. They received several carloads of Pana coal this morning. The firm consists of J. T. Murray, the wellknown coal man, and Frank G. Vaile. They will handle the Pana coal as well as other good grades, and are occupying the office formerly owned by George Woodruff.

THE COOKBOOK

If the pastry be slow in browning, throw a little sugar on the oven shelf. This will expedite matters greatly.

If the skin of a beet root has got broken, sear the part with a redhot iron before cooking it. This will prevent the beet from bleeding.

The next time tomato soup is planned for the family dinner try adding a few slices of orange just before serving and enjoy the pleasant flavor which they impart.

Eggplant is most palatable when broiled. Cut into thick slices, with the skin on; dip in olive oil seasoned with salt and pepper and cook on wire broiler over a clear fire five or ten minutes.

When a cake contains too much flour or has baked too fast, it will sink from the edges or rise up sharply, with a crack in the middle. If cake has a coarse grain, it was not beaten enough or the oven was too slow.

If you like cocoanut pyramids, beat the whites of two eggs till light and stiff; mix with two cupfuls of grated cocoanut, one cupful of powdered sugar and two tablespoonfuls of flour; make into pyramids and bake brown.

The Shortest Lived City.

Which of the large cities of the world had the shortest life?

In the ancient world the answer is Palmyra. The period of its prosperity extended only from 117 to 273 A. D., 156 years. In the fifth century B. C. Persopolis was the capital of the Persian empire for thirty years only, but this was merely an accident of war and politics. Carthage was the shortest lived seat of empire, for it only endured about 500 years. In modern times the answer would be Amarapura, the former capital of Burma. Founded in 1783, it had in 1800 a population of 175,000. Sixty years later the seat of government was transferred to Mandalay, and Amarapura is now represented only by a few ruined temples and bamboo huts.—London Answers.

What's In a Name?

Her name is Margaret, but all her friends call her Daisy. It is a pet name she has been known by since she was a child. There is a pretty, bright, charming freshness about her which the flower suggests. But notwithstanding the appropriateness of the nickname the girl, who has recently attained the dignity of an engagement ring, has discarded it once and for all, and no one is a friend of hers who does not call her Margaret. It is all on account of the new name she is to take. She will eventually be Mrs. Field.

"And it is a very nice name, too," says the girl, "but I do not intend to be a 'daisy field.'"—New York Times.

THE SAUERKRAUT PEDDLER.

A Character Common to the German Section of New York.

The regular and popular visitor to the German inns and taverns of the east side is the sauerkraut man. He brings his calling with him from the old country and finds a more profitable field in New York than in Berlin or Hamburg. His equipment is quite curious. He wears a blue or white apron running from his neck nearly to the ankles, and from his shoulders is suspended a circular metal box which goes half around his waist. It has three large compartments, two of which are surrounded by hot water. In one are well cooked frankfurter sausages and in the other thoroughly boiled sauerkraut. In the third compartment is potato salad. He carries in his hand a basket in which are small plates and steel forks. One sausage and a generous spoonful of sauerkraut and potato salad cost 5 cents. All three articles are of good quality, well cooked and seasoned. He finds his best customers in the bowling alleys, where the exertion demanded by the game produces large appetites. Next to these are the taverns which do not supply food with their drink. Last of all are the halls and meeting rooms where different societies assemble. His nightly stock consists of fifty sausages, seven pounds of sauerkraut and as much more of salad. On bad evenings he takes only half as much stock as on fair ones. Some of the more fortunate peddlers have arrangements with clubs which pay them a very fair profit upon their goods. Others are free lances who visit every place where they think they can effect a sale.

The metal boxes are very ingenious and are made in Germany. The metal is some variety of pewter, and the fitting of the compartments and of the entire affair to the body is very accurate. The covers are so well hinged and snug at the edges that when the owner falls down he is not liable to spill any of the contents. The contrivance costs some $3 in Germany, and about $5 in New York. A few of the peddlers appeal to educated palates and carry with them cervelat, bock, reh, leberwurst and vienna, as well as frankfurters. These fancy sausages usually bring 10 cents instead of the regulation 5.

The forks are washed after the customer has finished his little meal, and from repeated cleansing and use are as bright as silver. The plates, on the other hand, are so banged and bruised that they might be easily mistaken for crackle wear.—New York Post.

The Wrath of the Bee.

At the end of winter most hives have exhausted their stores and become dangerous. When this is the case, woe to him who touches the hives. Smoke has lost its spell, and you shall scarce have emitted the first puffs before 20,000 acrid and enraged demons will dart from within the walls, overwhelm your hands, blind your eyes and blacken your face. No living being except, they say, the bear and the sphinx atropos, can resist the rage of the mailed legions. Above all, do not struggle. The fury would overtake the neighboring colonies. There is no means of safety other than instant flight through the bushes. The bee is less rancorous, less implacable, than the wasp and rarely pursues her enemy. If flight be impossible, absolute immobility alone might calm her or put her off the scent. She fears and attacks any too sudden movement, but at once forgives that which no longer stirs.—Harper's.

A Safe Age.

The insuring of one's life is one of those things which one is most apt to put off. There are few, however, who postpone what ought to be the inevitable until so late a period in life as did the tough old smack owner of Grimsby. When he presented himself at the insurance office, he was naturally asked his age. His reply was, "Ninety-four." "Why, my good man, we cannot insure you," said the company. "Why not?" he demanded. "Why, you are ninety-four years of age." "What of that?" the old man cried. "Look at statistics, and they will tell you that fewer men die at ninety-four than at any other age."—London Business Illustrated.

Their Branch of Service.

"To what branch of the military service do captains of industry belong?" asked the recognized yet surviving joker of the party.

"I give it up," replied his victim wearily.

"To the artillery, because they're all 'big guns.' See? Ha, ha, ho, ho!"—Syracuse Herald.

Cool Trees.

It is not shade alone that makes it cooler under a tree in the summer. The coolness of the tree itself helps, for its temperature is about 45 degrees F. at all times, as that of the human body is a fraction more than 98 degrees. So a clump of trees cools the air as a piece of ice cools the water in a pitcher.

Rasping.

Barber—How's the razor, sir?

Customer—Didn't know I was being shaved.

Barber (flattered)—Very glad, I'm sure, sir.

Customer—I thought I was being sandpapered.—Pick Me Up.

Happily Married.

"I hope you have found happiness in marriage, dear."

"Oh, yes. I can do lots of things I didn't dare do when I was a girl."—New York Press.

Perseverance not only goes far to insure success, but also obtains honors for those who, although the less fortunate, have been the most diligent.

The Defect in the Child Labor Law.

Gratifying indications of a vigorous campaign against violators of the Illinois child labor and factory laws are now being furnished by State Factory Inspector Davies.

Coincident with the hearing of a case against a Chicago manufacturer, in whose factory there were found eight children under the age limit of 14 years, the factory inspector has mapped out a line of prosecution which he declares will be vigorously followed out in the campaign he has inaugurated against offenders. This prosecution will extend to firms in and out of Chicago who disregard the law on employing children under 14, or who fail to exact affidavits from parents of children whose ages range between 14 and 16.

Notwithstanding the obvious inadequacies of the law and the small number of inspectors provided for the the state, if this plan of campaign is fearlessly carried out it cannot fail to force hundreds of parents to take children out of factories and place them in school. That the affidavit feature of the law is its greatest weakness and offers an easy loophole for greedy parents who compel their little ones to become contributors to the family exchequer is generally conceded. Inspector Davies now has in hand fifty-seven instances of false affidavits—oaths chiefly from Chicago mothers and fathers and their children were over 14 years of age, when both the church and christening records and the school records absolutely disprove these sworn statements.

Until the legislature remedies this defect in the law by requiring affidavits based upon church, school or county records, instead of the mere statement of the parent, we cannot hope to entirely abate the evils of child labor in Illinois.

ALTON RAILWAY LITIGATION

Begun by a Minority Stockholder Who Disapproves of a Recent Deal in the Stock.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—A bill attacking the validity of the lease entered into between the Chicago and Alton "Railroad" company and the Chicago and Alton 'Railway" company in April, 1900, by which all of the property owned by the former was transferred to the latter for a period of ninety-nine years, was filed in the circuit court yesterday by Henry D. Laughlin, a minority stockholder in the Chicago and Alton "Railroad" company.

Laughlin declares that E. H. Harriman and his associates, including Geo. J. Gould, M. F. Schiff, James Stillman and others, secured a controlling interest in the Chicago and Alton Railroad company, and after executing the lease manipulated a "squeeze" in the stock in which matters were so arranged that the squeezers would "catch the gopher comin' or goin'" like the farmer did; Laughlin complains that the minority stockholders were heavy losers in this, wherefore he wants the lease smashed.

WILL MULCT THE 'PHONE CO.

Decision by a Chicago Judge May Cost the Hello Exchange About a Million.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—A decision rendered by Judge Tuley in a suit instituted by the Illinois Manufacturers' association may, it is estimated, cost the Chicago Telephone company more than $1,000,000, unless the supreme court reverses the judgment of Judge Tuley.

Judge Tuley's order permits the parties to the suit against the telephone company to secure the return of the funds alleged to have been collected in excess of the franchise rate. The construction placed on his decision by attorneys for the complainants is that 5,000 or 6,000 telephone lessees may come into the suit and become parties to it whether they are members of the Manufacturers' association or not.

Guam Shaken by Earthquakes.

Manila, Oct. 7.—The collier Austin, which has just arrived here from Guam, brings reports of a series of severe earthquakes there Sept. 22, as a result of which the marine barracks at Agana and other buildings collapsed, and much other damage was done. Two natives were killed. One hundred and eighty shocks were experienced in twenty-four hours.

Got Any Bonds to Sell?

Washington, Oct. 7.—Secretary Shaw said yesterday that certain bond dealers had asked him if propositions to purchase bonds would be considered by the department. He has replied that propositions of this kind coming from any source would be considered to the extent of $5,000,000, but that the rate would have to be low if any purchases were made.

Low Cannot See Anything in It.

New York, Oct. 7. — In reply to Mayor Maybury, of Detroit, inviting New York to take part in the coal conference at Detroit, Mayor Low replies: "In view of the failure of the president's effort at meditation, and because of the vagueness of your programme, I have determined not to send delegates to the conference at Detroit."

Denial of the Yohe Marriage.

Buenos Ayres, Oct. 7. — Putnam Bradlee Strong and May Yohe have not been married here. Their marriage would be in contravention of the laws of Argentina. A New York dispatch says that there was received there last week the following dispatch from here: "Married the second. (Signed) May Strong."

Hearst Favors Public Ownership.

New York, Oct. 7.—In a speech yesterday accepting the Democratic nomination for congress in the Eleventh district William Randolph Hearst announced himself as in favor of public ownership of certain public utilites, specifying, as a natural beginning, railroads and telegraphs.

AERIAL POLO.

A Queer Kind of Amusement on a Pacific Ocean Island.

Writing on "Our Equatorial Islands" in the Century, James D. Hague says:

It became an amusing diversion to overturn the large flat stones beneath which the rats were hiding in solid masses and watch them as they scampered in all directions, pursued and quickly snatched up by the man-o'-war hawks. These crafty birds were apt to learn that the appearance of a man walking on the island, especially with a dog, meant rats for them, and any one thus going forth was usually followed by a hovering flock, ready and impatient for the sport they had learned to expect. A rat brought to hand by the dog was quickly tossed in air, where the birds were ready to snatch it, sometimes with a contest on the wing for the disputed possession. One form of this sport, a sort of aerial polo, which seemed to be as good fun for the birds as for the observers, consisted in tossing two rats into the air at the same moment, not singly and apart, but tied together with about six feet of strong twine.

Instantly the birds made a dash for the rats, and the successful winner of the first prize went sailing off with one rat in his bill and the other swinging in the air beneath until snatched by the second winner, when, after a quick, sharp struggle and a taut strain on the cord, the bird with the weaker hold was compelled to let go. This then went on as a continuous performance, with somewhat Jonah-like but rapidly repeated disappearances and reappearances of the little rats, swallowed and reluctantly disgorged by the birds in quick succession until the flock, thoroughly exhausted by their impetuous flight and extraordinary exercise, alighted on the ground for a short truce, when the two temporary stakeholders would be found sitting face to face, keenly eying each other from opposite ends of the string still connecting them, each anxiously on the sharp lookout for sudden jerks and unpleasant surprises, while all the other pursuers gathered around in a ring, waiting for the two prize birds to fly. The general aspect of all participants seemed to verify the familiar adage that the pleasure is not in the game, but in the chase.

SCIENCE SIFTINGS.

While volcanic eruptions are usually restricted in area, earthquakes are not.

If all the mountains in the world were leveled, the average height of the land would rise nearly 250 feet.

The face of Jupiter presents a considerable number of markings, notably one great scarlet patch covering nearly 400,000 square miles.

The amount of heat produced by an average man in a day's work would be sufficient to raise sixty-three pounds of water from freezing to boiling point.

Cirrus clouds were once observed at a height of 43,800 feet. This is by far the greatest height at which cloud vapor has ever been noted above the surface of the earth.

Experiments made while in a balloon show that when a height of 15,000 feet has been reached the number of corpuscles in the human blood have increased by one-third.

The atmospheric pressure upon the surface of an ordinary man is 32,400 pounds, or over fourteen and a half tons. The ordinary rise and fall of the barometer increases or decreases this pressure by 2,500 pounds.

His Offhand Manner.

"Dan," said a contractor to one of his trusted employees, "when you are seeing about that lime this morning, I wish you to mention to Dempsey that I would like to have that bill paid. You needn't press it, you know, but just mention it to him in an offhand manner."

"Yes, sorr."

"I got the money from Dempsey," said Dan on his return.

"I'm very glad. You merely alluded to it in an offhand way, I suppose?"

"Yes, sorr. I handed him the bill and told him if he didn't pay it I would let off my hand and give him a black eye that he wouldn't forget for a month, and he paid it at wanst."—London Answers.

Filial Sympathy.

"When I was your age," said Mr. Goldbags sternly, "I earned my own living."

His son looked uneasy, but was silent.

"Well, have you nothing to say for yourself in that connection?"

"N-nothing, sir, except that I sympathize with you, and congratulate you on the fact that it's all over."—London Tit-Bits.

Not as Considerate as He Might Be.

"He's a good friend of yours, isn't he?"

"Oh, only medium."

"What do you mean by medium?"

"Oh, he listens while I tell him all of my troubles, but he also wants me to listen while he tells me all of his."—Chicago Post.

He Had It.

"Yes; it's Fullerton's hobby that advice is cheap and within the reach of every person."

"What does he mean, anyhow?"

"What he says, I suppose. He's a confidential divorce lawyer." — Baltimore News.

An Æsthetic Soul.

"Well, did she buy the book?"

"No," replied the clerk. "She said she didn't like the cover design."—Detroit Free Press.

If we could raise our neighbor's children instead of our own, there would be a model generation.—New York News.

HE TOOK THE SHOWER BATH

And It Drove Him From the Yosemite Back to New England.

After a week of little journeys, striking here and there a few miles to absorb the Yosemite valley from a dozen coignes of vantage, we were whipping the Illilouette one afternoon for mountain trout, says the World's Work.

"Tomorrow," said a voice, "I shall take a shower bath under the seventeen hundred foot fall."

"You," said another voice, "are a fool."

"Not at all," came back argumentatively. "The river's very low. What there is of it turns to spray in the first hundred feet; it will simply come down like rain. Why, you'd go under the Bridal Veil yourself. Only that's prosaic. This is something big. Come on."

"Not I."

But I was there to see. The water, as he had said, came down, a considerable part of it, in rain and spray that flew out on the wind incredible distances. But to crawl down, dressed in a bathing suit, closer to the main stream that falls to the pool and upon the rocks with a murderous swish in the air and a roar like a railway train when it strikes was daring to foolhardiness. At any moment a veering wind might swing the whole mass upon the tall, slim figure backing tentatively on all fours down the jagged talus slope, his eyeglass pebbles glinting cheerfully. A steady breeze kept the fall swung out a little the other way, and the spray burgeoned out far up the other slope. The roar was deafening.

All at once the wind shifted, the water swung back, and in a flash the human figure was blotted out in a deluge that turned me sick. For a second—that seemed an hour—it played on the spot fiendishly, it seemed to me, standing horrified there, and then slowly it swept away.

And then there was a movement, a painful, crawling movement, down there on the slope, and I scrambled down the slippery rocks to help a blinking, creeping, much surprised youth, bleeding from a hundred cuts, up to where his clothes lay. He was still too dazed to speak. When his breath returned and his extra glasses were perched again on his nose, he said:

"The oceans fell upon me! For God's sake, come back to New England!"

And we went.

NATURAL HISTORY.

Ostriches live to the age of about sixty years.

The mandarin duck is one of the most beautiful of aquatic birds.

So voracious is the cod that it will swallow anything it sees in motion.

An eel has two separate hearts. One beats 60, the other 160, times a minute.

A ladybird can travel 20,000,000,000 times its own length in an hour. In that time a sloth can only travel fifty times its own length.

There is no country in the world in which the raven is not found to be native; it is also the only bird known to ornithologists which is of such cosmopolitan character.

Only one existing reptile can sustain itself in the air. This is the flying dragon of the East Indies. It has no real wings, but can glide from tree to tree like a flying squirrel.

The common house fly usually produces the note F in flying. To do so it must vibrate its wings 335 times a second. The honey bee sounds A, which means that its wing vibrations are 440 to the second.

First Analysis of Aerolites.

In 1796 a stone weighing fifty-six pounds was exhibited in London. It was said to have fallen from the sky in Yorkshire in the previous December, but this statement was received with great incredulity. At that time Sir Joseph Banks was president of the Royal society, and he noticed a strong resemblance between the Yorkshire stone and one sent to him from Siena, in Italy, which was said to have fallen from the sky. Two or three years later he received an account of a fall of stones near Benares, in Hindustan. A chemical analysis of the stones from all three sources proved them to be identical in composition, and incredulity as to their meteoric origin began to give way.—Notes and Queries.

Eccentricities of English.

There is a new maid in the family, a Swedish girl, who has many things besides language to learn, says an exchange. Her new mistress, who is a young wife with a husband many years her senior, is trying to instruct her. One of the lessons was upon bread, the girl being told that she should speak of bread which had lost its freshness as stale, and not old. The girl was sure to remember this, for she was quick to learn, and she did. So the young wife knew when a few days later the maid remarked to her confidentially:

"It is too bad, isn't it, that your husband is so much more stale than you are!"—Detroit Free Press.

Preliminary.

The policeman heard high words and poked his head in the door.

"What's goin' on here?" he demanded.

"Nawthin'! Nawthin' at all," answered one of the belligerent Irishmen in the middle of the floor. "There's nawthin' goin' on, but there's a fight comin' off in liss than a minute if ye'll only keep movin'."—Chicago Post.

He Had to Die.

"If you refuse me," cried Moody, "my blood will be upon your head. I cannot live without you!"

"Well, self preservation is the first law of nature," replied Miss Cooley. "I simply couldn't live with you."—Philadelphia Press.

HENRY CLAY AS AN ACTOR.

How the Great Lawyer Won a Hopeless Case.

An old and well known traveler, who has recently settled in Chicago, while coming in from Pewee valley the other afternoon told an interesting story about Henry Clay, the great Kentucky statesman. The story teller in his youth lived in Mr. Clay's district during the time when Henry Clay was at his prime as a lawyer.

"A man was once being tried for murder," said the narrator, "and his case looked hopeless indeed. He had without any seeming provocation murdered one of his neighbors in cold blood. Not a lawyer in the county would touch the case. It looked bad enough to ruin the reputation of any barrister.

"The man as a last extremity appealed to Mr. Clay to take the case for him. Every one thought that Clay would certainly refuse, but when the celebrated lawyer looked into the matter his fighting blood was roused, and, to the great surprise of all, he accepted.

"Then came a trial the like of which I have never seen. Clay slowly carried on the case, and it looked more and more hopeless. The only ground of defense the prisoner had was that the murdered man had looked at him with such a fierce, murderous look that out of self defense he had struck first. A ripple passed through the jury at this evidence.

"The time came for Clay to make his defense. It was settled in the minds of the spectators that the man was guilty of murder in the first degree. Clay calmly proceeded, laid all the proof before them in his masterly way, then, just as he was about to conclude, he played his last and master card.

"'Gentlemen of the jury,' he said, assuming the fiercest, blackest look and carrying the most undying hatred in it that I have ever seen, 'gentlemen, if a man should look at you like this what would you do?'

"That was all he said, but that was enough. The jury was startled, and some even quailed on their seats. The judge moved uneasily on his bench. After fifteen minutes the jury filed slowly back with a 'Not guilty, your honor.' The victory was complete.

"When Clay was congratulated on his easy victory, he said:

"'It was not so easy as you think. I spent days and days in my room before the mirror practicing that look. It took more hard work to give that look than to investigate the most obtuse case.'"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

An Ancient Bible.

In the Cottonian library in England is an old manuscript copy of a part of the Bible in Latin. The London Chronicle says it was used at the coronations of English sovereigns 300 years before the "stone of destiny" was brought from Scone to Westminster by Edward I.

If this be true, the use of this Bible for the purpose dates back to the year 1000. It is a quarto of 217 leaves, containing the four gospels, and seems from the style of the writing and illuminations, which are very beautiful, to have been made about the end of the ninth century.

It narrowly escaped destruction in the fire at Ashburnham House in 1731, of which it bears evidence in its crumpled leaves and singed margins. There is some evidence that the son of Edward the Elder, Athelstan the Glorious, who was king of the West Saxons from 925 to 940, owned this Bible and gave it to the church of Dover.

Bats and Vampires.

At sunset in the forest of Guiana the bats flit from their hiding places, some taking the place of the parrots and flocking around the fruit trees, while the horrid vampires wander far and near in search of some sleeping animal, or even man, in order to obtain a meal. Cows, goats, hogs, fowls as well as game birds and quadrupeds all suffer from their attacks if not secured in well latticed pens, while the traveler must not be surprised when awaking to find blood oozing from a wound in his foot or temple.

In some places domestic animals cannot be kept at all, as they are so weakened by repeated attacks as to ultimately die of exhaustion. Fortunately, however, the vampires are not very common, and with proper care may be excluded from dwelling houses and stock pens.—Longman's Magazine.

Ideas of Happiness.

Two young women, patently of the "saleslady" persuasion, rode down Chestnut street in a crowded trolley car on a recent morning. They chatted animatedly about the merits and demerits of Will and Gus till they reached Broad street. From there to Twelfth they preserved a dreamy silence. Then one broke out with:

"I say, Ag, what would you choose if you could have everything in the world you asked for?"

"Well," said Ag slowly and musingly, "I think I'd choose enough silk dresses to last me for the next ten years. What'u'd you take, Sade?"

"Me?" replied Sade. "It's the dream of me life, Ag, to have all the money I'd want, so I could go to me job in a cab every morning."—Philadelphia Times.

Complete Combustion

Round Oak Stoves are made entirely different from all other stoves. There are many imitations, but the resemblance is only in the exterior design. The interior construction of the Round Oak Stoves makes complete combustion possible —note the white smoke from the chimney—there is no waste of fuel, and for this reason less fuel is required. Special fixtures for hard or soft coal, permit the use of any kind of fuel in

Round Oak Stoves

Other improvements diffuse the heat throughout the room, instead of letting it escape through the flues; prevent clinkers; make it possible to keep a fire at will. NO. 17 PUDDING LANE

By J. Hamilton Graham

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson

I am called an eccentric man, and I am rather proud of the fact. Among my eccentricities is that of carrying an ear trumpet and pretending to be deaf whenever I go on a journey. As a matter of fact, my sense of hearing is most acute, equal to that of a fox, I think, but in carrying the trumpet I have two objects in view—first, nobody thinks of asking me questions on trifling matters or seeks to draw me into political arguments, and, second, I have the fun of overhearing much not meant for my ears. There are times when my fellow travelers comment on my personal appearance, much to my detriment, but I have to take the bitter with the sweet.

The day I went up to London from Liverpool to be present at the funeral of my old friend Stebbins the compartment was full at starting. I had my trumpet along and copied the actions and attitude of a deaf man. By the time the journey was half completed there were only three of us left. The other two men were acquaintances. Neither was over thirty-eight, and from their general looks I sized them up as belonging to the gambling and horse racing fraternity. It was easy to see that one dominated the other, and the dominant man had a hunted, desperate look in his eyes. I judged he was in desperate straits for money and that he would be willing to risk a great deal to make a haul. As soon as the three of us were alone he said to the other:

"Now we can talk matters over and settle particulars."

"But the old dozer there," protested the other.

"He couldn't hear the explosion of a ton of dynamite. If I thought he had £50 in his pocket, I'd twist his neck and heave him out of the door, but I don't believe he's got 10 shillings about him."

"You'd be a fool to meddle with any one until we pull this affair off. Now talk low and go ahead. It is on Pudding lane, is it?"

"No. 17 Pudding lane. Don't write it down, but don't forget it. It is a full mile from the depot. We take a cab to the corner of Hoke street, and then we have only two blocks to walk. The place is open till 10 o'clock in the evening."

"And the name of the party?"

"Is Webb. He's a man of sixty and not in good health. One crack on the head will settle his business. When you have done for him, you raise one of the front windows as a signal to me. I shall be exactly opposite. We can loot the place in fifteen minutes if the safe is still open."

"I have told you I would not strike to kill," said the weaker one after a pause.

"I don't ask you to," replied the other; "but just remember this—if you don't finish him we may both end our days in prison. He's a foxy old rascal, and he may get a peep at me. If he does, then goodby, and you'll be in the same boat. What's the use of being squeamish over it? Why not make a safe job? He is the biggest kind of a robber and a man without a heart."

"But I couldn't strike to kill."

"Have your own way, but if he comes to I shall finish him off in a hurry, and you'll have to stand in with me."

"Suppose he is suspicious of me and keeps me outside the railing?"

"He won't be. You show him the diamond ring I have to give you, and he'll invite you inside fast enough. Tell him it's a part of a big haul, and you can steer the rest his way, and he'll pat you on the shoulder and bring out a bottle of wine. The only thing is that you must not make a bungle of it."

They had agreed that I was deaf, but at the same time they had lowered their voices until an ordinary man would not have caught a word. I heard everything, however, and I reasoned it out that they were after either a pawnbroker or a "fence." It was to be a case of assault and robbery—perhaps worse.

In the same cautious tones they planned where to dispose of the plunder and in what direction to take flight, and I came to understand the affair as plainly as if I had been a third man. I am an imperturbable man. I sat there for two hours and made no sign, but I was doing a great deal of thinking just the same. It has always been my habit to mind my own business. I have never cared who was being robbed or murdered as long as robbers and murderers let me alone. My first idea was to keep hands off, but it looked like such a pretty case that I changed my mind. It was an opportunity for a Scotland Yard to capture a couple of desperadoes red handed, and no doubt I would be patted on the back for the pointer I was to give them.

We reached London at 8:10 in the morning, and while the two men took a cab and drove away for Hoke street I called one and drove direct to Scotland Yard. I was snubbed as soon as I arrived. An official to whom I was directed asked me if a horse had fallen down or a chimney caught fire that I came into his presence in such a hurry. I allow no man to rub my fur the wrong way and therefore gave this official better than he sent. We used up ten minutes in passing compliments, and then a detective was called to hear my story. He heard it under protest. As soon as I mentioned the fact that I was not deaf he indignantly demanded:

"Then why carry that ear trumpet? Your carrying the trumpet is a gross deception on the public, sir."

"The public is not affected one way or the other," I replied, "as it is no one's business whether I am deaf or all right. In this case my pretense of being deaf has served the public a good turn, unless you stand here and let murder and robbery be done."

"Sir," he continued, "I believe you can be arrested for carrying an ear trumpet when your hearing is perfectly good. I believe such a thing comes under the head of misdemeanors. Tom, will you look in the book?"

The book was consulted, and much to the detective's disappointment my ear trumpet was not mentioned along with pistols, knives and slungshots.

"But you can be detained as a suspicious person," he said as a look of relief came to his face. "Yes, that is the charge, and I shall detain you until the inspector arrives."

"If you let those two men carry out their plan, I will make London too hot to hold you!" I shouted in my anger.

In reply I was locked up. An hour later the inspector on duty strolled in from his dinner, and my case was laid before him. It began with the trumpet.

"I understand, sir," he said as he fixed me with a glare, "that you carry an ear trumpet to deceive the public."

"Well, what if I do?" I yelled at him.

"Speak respectfully, or it will be the worse for you. I take it that a man who will deceive the general public will also deceive the police. You can tell your story, however."

I told it in a straightforward way, but when I had finished the inspector smiled in derision and shook his head and replied:

"Too thin, my man. You want to lead us off on a jolly, but you've fallen over your own feet. I think it will be safe to detain you until morning."

At that hour of the night I could not hope to find one of my few friends in London to identify me and therefore submitted with as good grace as possible. I almost begged of the inspector to send men to Pudding lane. He gave me a look of pity and disdain and turned away.

But I was not held all night. At midnight a report reached the yard that the pawnbroker at 17 Pudding lane had been murdered and his rooms plundered, and when I was taken out of my cell into the presence of the inspector I found him both abject and agitated. He begged my pardon in the most servile way and entreated me not to make my story public and ruin him. I refused to make any promises. I had not described the men to him in telling my story, and now I absolutely refused to give him a clew. I had been humiliated and treated with contempt while trying to serve the police, and you may be sure I bore them no good will. Before I got satisfaction I had the inspector, the detective and another man bounced, and it was through my description of the murderers that a private detective agency ran them down in Germany and secured a big reward.

The Town Had Offsets.

"I had been knocking about a Kansas town in the evening," said a Boston drummer with a limp, "and in heading for my hotel I walked plump into an open sewer which had no red light of warning. I had a bad fall and broke my hip, and I wasn't yet out of the sewer when I made up my mind to sue for $20,000 damages. I was taken to the hospital, and next day the city attorney called on me to know what I was going to do.

"'I'm going to sue the town, of course,' I replied.

"'But what for?' he asked.

"'For personal damages. There should have been a railing or a light, but there was neither, and my injury will lay me up for weeks.'

"'But don't you know what you escaped by falling into the sewer?' he asked.

"'No.'

"'Then let me tell you that the roof of the hotel fell in last night and killed three men, and if you had been in your bed you would have been crushed to pulp. You really owe this town something instead of talking about damages.'

"When able to get out," continued the drummer, "I found that public opinion was against me and the people ready to stand a suit, and by advice of a lawyer I settled the case for $125. I didn't even get all that. In tumbling into the sewer I broke two planks and brought a cavein, and the damages were assessed at $5.66 and taken out of my money."

Still In the Business.

Lord Kames, a once famous Scottish judge, on his way southward to Perth from the northern circuit, had to spend the night at Dunkeld. Next morning he made for the ferry across the Tay, but, missing the road, asked a passerby to show him the way.

"With all my heart," said the stranger. "I see your lordship does not know me. My name's John Gow. Don't you remember me? I had the honor to be tried before your lordship for sheep stealing."

"Now I recollect you, John," replied the judge. "And how is your wife? She, too, had the honor to appear before me for receiving the sheep, knowing them to have been stolen."

"Ah, we were very lucky to get off for want of evidence, but I am still in the butchering business."

"Then," quoth Lord Kames as he came in sight of the ferry, "we may have the honor of meeting again."—Scottish American.

Hardly That.

Cholly—Miss Mabel, do you know you've stolen my heart?

Mabel—Oh, well, that's only petit larceny.—New York Journal.

DYING LIKE A MAN

By HOWARD WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson

How long Bones, the vagabond, had been a country tramp before he reached London could only be guessed at by the butchers and fishmongers of Applegate market, where he took up his headquarters. He was a man of fifty when he first hung about, and he had the appearance of being "seasoned." No one ever asked Bones any questions, and he volunteered no information.

Some one called him Bones the first day he appeared, and the name stuck to him. He accepted it without remark. What is the odds to a vagabond whether he is called Bones or Jones?

It may seem curious that no one ever became sufficiently interested in Bones to draw him out or that some day when he longed for human sympathy he did not volunteer his story; but, as a matter of fact, he was only one of hundreds of vagabonds slouching along the streets of London. Why should any one of higher station care who he was or whence he came? And if he had related his history it might have been that of scores of others and would have brought neither sympathy nor sixpence.

Bones was inoffensive. He was also passably honest, and when kicked out of the way he took it as a matter of course. He was content with the shabbiest raiment and had not too hearty an appetite, so it came about that he was allowed to hang about the market without complaint. His lodgings were in vacant buildings, coalyards or doorways, and the only time he got full meals and a decent bed was when the police pulled him in and he was sent to the workhouse.

He had put in ten years in London, and there was no appreciable change in him. He was gray haired, stoop shouldered, ragged and red nosed, but he had been that on his arrival. Nor had there been any change in his plans. He had come to London to live out the remainder of his days, and he was doing it. If it ever occurred to him that some day he must land in the almshouse, die and be buried as a pauper, he said nothing about it and was not worried.

One day Bones was slouching along David street. He was not begging or sightseeing or looking after coal to be put in. He was simply vagabondizing and letting his feet take his body where they would. If a policeman had made an arrest, Bones would have had no curiosity. If the fire engines had come rattling up, he would not have halted and become a spectator. He had witnessed dogfights, street rows, fires and arrests so often that they no longer held any interest.

One who saw him dragging along with his eyes on the ground would have said that nothing but a kick from a truck horse could have aroused him, and yet a mere trifle did the business. Of a sudden a pet poodle pursued by a gang of boys ran up to Bones as if to ask for protection. He picked up the dog and carried it along, and, though threatened by the hoodlums, he clung to the canine. After walking two blocks he came upon a carriage containing a girl about ten years old. The poodle had escaped from the carriage as it was driving through Willow place, and the little one was crying piteously over her loss.

Bones walked directly to the vehicle and placed the dog in her arms, and the overjoyed girl reached out for his hand and exclaimed:

"Oh, you good, good man! You look ragged, but I know you're not bad. I'll give you some money, and if you'll come and see papa I know he'll find a place for you and help you along. My name is Minnie, and it was so good of you, and"—

But the driver shook his whip at the vagabond and started up his horses. For the rest of that day Bones was only outwardly Bones. He had been kindly addressed by a human being. He had been told that some one might help him upward. His hand had been shaken in gratitude, and he had been called a good man. There was something new here to hold his thoughts and turn over in his mind, and he was so preoccupied that he crept to his bed in a coalyard without having begged the usual crust.

"It must be that I am a human being after all. If I hadn't been, the girl wouldn't have spoken as she did. To have some one shake hands with me, to call me a good man, to thank me for a service—I can't make it out. But it's come too late. I'm too old to change. Nothing could lift me up now, nothing give me back what I have lost. There's only one thing I can do, and that's to pray God I may die like a man—like the man I once was."

A week later, though Bones heard nothing of it, all London thrilled with excitement and indignation over a case of kidnaping. A little girl, the daughter of a banker, had been caught up at her father's very gate in the dusk of evening and carried off in a carriage. Bones never read the newspapers, and it was seldom that he was in the company of one who did. Had he read or heard all about the case, however, it would only have been of passing interest—just another crime to lengthen the daily list.

One day he slouched along David street again. He had been driven out of his lodgings in the coalyard, and as winter was coming on he was looking for a vacant house to turn into o' nights. Between Great George and Canterbury streets he discovered a terrace of four houses which were for rent. One of them cornered on an alley, and after a careful reconnoissance Bones decided that an entrance might be effected after dark. He would have neither bed nor fire, but the poorest of the rooms would be comfortable for a vagabond.

When night came, Bones was on hand. It was not the first vacant house by a hundred in which he had taken up temporary quarters, and he knew the trick of prying open cellar windows. Once in the cellar, the light of a match showed him the way upstairs, and as he reached the kitchen he was surprised to find a bit of fire in the range and the remains of a meal on a shelf. Before giving the matter any thought he ate up all the food before him and hugged the range until he had ceased to shiver. Some one had been ahead of him. It was not a vagabond like himself, because there were the food and the fire, and thieves and burglars would have no call to enter empty houses. A half consumed candle showed that the tenant had been there for a night or two, and it was likely he had a key to one of the doors. Bones was somewhat mystified, but not frightened. With a lighted candle in his hand he set out to explore a little and decide which room to sleep in. After a look into the three or four rooms downstairs he mounted to the second story and had hardly reached the landing when he heard men's voices from one of the bedrooms, together with what seemed the sobbing of a child. Out went his candle, and he got down on hands and knees and crept along to listen at the door. There were two men and a child in that room, and the child was weeping and pleading.

No one will ever know what Bones thought or planned to do, as the door was suddenly opened by one of the men, and he was found crouching there. He did not run away. One look into the lighted room showed him an old table, two or three chairs, a bed of blankets and on the bed the little girl of the lost dog. He leaped into the room as the man started back, and as the girl recognized him and cried out the two kidnapers cursed.

There was half a minute when no one moved. Then one of the men rushed to the door and shut it, and both drew knives and advanced upon the vagabond. All her life the little girl will remember how his impassive face lighted up, how he suddenly grew straight and tall, how his eyes glistened as he seized one of the heavy chairs and began the battle. They were a pair of burly ruffians, and they had long, keen knives, but it was a fight lasting many long minutes. As they stabbed and thrust he beat them to their knees. They wounded him again and again, and he left a trail of blood as he shifted his position, but one of them was dying and the other had a broken arm before the old vagabond tottered and fell, with the broken chair still clutched in his fingers. The child saw it all with bated breath and wide open eyes, and, though she did not know of his hope, she saw that he died like a man—aye, like the bravest of men!

With his broken bones and bruised body and with fear of the police in his heart the surviving ruffian made his way out of the house, and the child was left the long night with the dead. When morning came, she beat upon a window until attention was attracted and men broke in the door and rescued her. It was not the police who found the kidnapers, but old Bones. It was not a public officer who had eagerly sought a battle with the ruffians and yielded up his life after a heroic fight, but simply an old vagabond of Applegate market. And his eulogy and his epitaph were the words of the child who saw him do battle for her:

"He was old and dirty and ragged, but he was a man!"

The Politician as an Actor.

There are multitudinous small things which, as a little man, one would suppose must press heavily upon an eminent politician. He must be civil to all men—civiler perhaps to the fools than to any. The fools he has always with him—always. The eminent politician must serve as the especial butt to a vast and wonderful array of bores. How he must despise the large majority of his so called followers! With what scorn he must regard them in his heart! And yet how he has to go out of his way to solicit the favor of their vote and interest! How he has sometimes to palter with a lie—he must have! How he must be all things to all men!

He is an actor as much as any actor that ever trod the mimic stage, and be he sick or sad he has to give satisfaction to the audience in front if he would keep his situation. He has to struggle and strive to keep in his hands the ends of fifty different strings which are being pulled in fifty different directions and preserve his balance and his head amid them all.

And what is the end of it? What is the reward of the eminent politician? It is when one considers this question that one is amazed to think that any man should think it worth his while to pay the penalty of political greatness.—All the Year Round.

An Epitaph.

On the 10th of February, 1756, died a Miss Basnett at the age of twenty-three, who was buried in the churchyard of old St. Pancreas and upon whose tomb the following lines were placed:

Go, spotless honor and unsully'd truth;
Go, smiling innocence and blooming youth;
Go, female sweetness joined with manly sense;
Go, winning wit that never gave offense;
Go, soft humanity that blessed the poor;
Go, saint eyed patience from affection's door;
Go, modesty that never wore a frown;
Go, virtue and receive thy heavenly crown.
Not from a stranger came this heartfelt verse;
The friend inscrib'd thy tomb whose tear bedew'd thy hearse.

"The Tide of Life," Edward Weitzel's powerful melodrama of life in a great city, will be seen at the Dixon Opera House, Wednesday, Oct. 8th. The play is full of heart interest, there is a dainty love story, the humor is of the rollicking, touch-and-go variety, and there are several sensational climaxes. One shows a villain jumping out of a high window, and being electrocuted on a naked electric wire that he has clutched in descent, and another is where a young girl leaps to the roof of a flying freight train. The scenery is new, and the electrical effects which are patented, are daringly original.
